Your feedback is an important tool that Victoria's public transport organisations use to improve the public transport network. Every enquiry, suggestion, complaint and compliment helps to create a better public transport network.

As a result of customer feedback we made substantial improvements to our online information, produced a travelling on trains with prams and toddlers brochure, provided more information on accessible transport and improved safety at platform tram stops.

This guide explains the public transport feedback process and the public transport organisations you can contact to express your views. There are many different organisations delivering public transport services, providing infrastructure and planning for our future needs. The guide also describes how the Public Transport Ombudsman can assist you.

All these organisations are listed in this guide for your reference. Their contact details are also included so you can easily contact them with your feedback.

Which organisation do I contact with my feedback about public transport?

Public transport organisations are listed on the reverse side of this brochure.

If you have any doubts about which organisation to contact, Metlink (for metropolitan service) and Viclink (for regional services) can direct you to the appropriate organisation. See the reverse side of this brochure for contact details.

What information is recorded when I provide feedback?

All feedback is logged and given a unique case number for easy follow-up. You will be informed of this case number and the expected response time.

In accordance with the Information Privacy Act 2000, any personal information collected is confidential and will only be used to resolve that feedback case.

When should I expect a response?

Feedback is categorised and prioritised.

The highest priority is allocated to issues such as immediate passenger safety and security. Cases in this category are acknowledged within one business day, with a further response within a further two business days if required. In emergency situations, the relevant authority is notified immediately.

For other types of feedback, you will receive an acknowledgement and response within seven business days.

If these timelines cannot be met, you will be contacted and advised of an expected response time.

What happens if I am not satisfied with the response to my feedback?

Each organisation is committed to resolving the feedback you provide. If you are not satisfied with your response, you can ask for your case to be escalated and reviewed by the relevant organisation's feedback manager.

If you do not receive a response to your feedback or you remain dissatisfied, you can contact the Public Transport Ombudsman.

The Public Transport Ombudsman provides an independent and accessible dispute resolution service. The Public Transport Ombudsman aims to resolve complaints quickly and informally and considers what is fair, reasonable, good industry practice and current law.

What types of cases can I refer to the Public Transport Ombudsman?

Cases must have already been lodged with the appropriate organisation or operator, and the operator must have been given a reasonable opportunity to resolve the issue. The Public Transport Ombudsman cannot investigate a case until after the relevant organisation has had this opportunity.

The Public Transport Ombudsman handles most cases about public transport including:

- service delivery, such as cancellations and reliability
- ticketing issues, for example ticket machines and validators
- infrastructure and vehicles
- the use of land and premises
- the conduct of authorised officers, employees, agents or contractors.

How do I lodge my case with the Public Transport Ombudsman?

The Public Transport Ombudsman provides a free service and can receive cases online, via email, telephone, fax or mail. See the reverse side of this brochure for contact details. Ombudsman officers are available to help you.
